Interiors 101: A Design Consultant's Workshop on Academic Library Planning

Presenting
Andrea Michaels,
President,
Michaels Associates,
Design Consultants, Inc.

Wednesday,
April 16, 2003

Library Services
Minnesota State University, Mankato

Minnesota State University, Mankato Library Services is pleased to present an all-day workshop about the process of space planning in libraries.

In particular we will be looking at how to better use existing space in academic libraries.

In the morning session, Ms. Michaels will present an overview of interior design and planning in libraries. The afternoon will consist of small group work to help you with your library's space usage issues. Plan to bring photos, blueprints, and/or other documents, that will help Ms. Michaels offer guidance for your library's space.

Andrea Michaels, along with her husband David, has more than 25 years of experience specializing in library planning and interior design. Her goal is always to create beautiful yet functional library interiors.

Ms. Michaels frequently teaches classes and workshops on this topic. She recently taught a space planning class at the University of Wisconsin-Madison School of Library and Information Science. The Michaels have been active ALA members and have numerous publications in library journals. Michaels Associates is currently working on space planning for the Minneapolis Public Library project. For more information, see the Michaels Associates web site.
